Peace Officer Recruitment Unit

Workshops and on-site testing launched in January

January is a time for new beginnings and new resolutions. For more than 20 percent of employees in the workforce, one of those resolutions will be to find a new job, according to a recent survey by Careerbuilder.com. And, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) is doing its part to help people keep their resolution.

Local Workshops

In January, the Peace Officer Recruitment Unit (PORU) started partnering with Institution Recruitment Teams to host employment workshops across the state.

All workshops include a 35-minute powerpoint presentation about peace officer opportunities with CDCR and a question and answer session with recruiters and institution staff.

They also include the opportunity to complete an application, take the written exam, and tour the institution.

Ironwood State Prison and Chuckawalla Valley State Prison sponsored the first workshop on January 11. More than 100 candidates attended the workshop, and were personally greeted by the Wardens from both institutions.

Four more workshops are scheduled this month (see chart above).

"It's a great opportunity to offer potential candidates a tour of our facilities and to offer local testing," said

Suzanne Chan, PORU Chief of Advertising and Marketing, "especially for those candidates who live far from our centralized testing centers."

More Workshops Planned

The PORU is contacting other institutions to schedule similar workshops.

For more information, please call Jerilyn Santillan, PORU Chief of Recruitment Events, at (916) 227-5732.

Introducing... The Licensed Vocational Nurse Classification

If you are looking for a career that can make a difference, or know someone who is a Licensed Vocational Nurse (LVN) or going to school to become an LVN the CDCR's Correctional LVN classification could be the answer.

As a Correctional LVN you will assist in the medical and/or mental health care of patients in one of California's State Prisons. Our staff is dedicated to putting into action our new vision for better ways to heal and cure.

An LVN position will allow you direct patient care, low patient to nursing ration, and a safe working environment in addition to multiple employee benefits.

The Office of Workforce Planning (OWP) has completed the revisions to the recruitment brochure for the LVN classification. The details of the benefits offered can be found in our new recruitment material. The information provided is intended to introduce health care professionals to the many opportunities CDCR has to offer. The exam for LVN can be completed
